

What's Your Risk Exposure?

As an ESOP company or one of its executives, officers or directors, you face unique liability exposures.

Fiduciary/Trustee Liability

Internal ESOP company trustees share unique liability exposures, specifically with discretion in purchase/sale of employer stock and voting of employer stock. Most fiduciary liability claims against trustees result from negligence, regardless of whether the company engages an outside trustee, raising the potential for significant financial liability and litigation.

D&O Liability

Attention to corporate governance within ESOP Companies has increased bringing more pressure to the Boards of Directors. Directors and officers face lawsuits from shareholders, government agencies, customers, suppliers and competitors.

Employment Practices Liability

Enactment of laws such as the Americans with Disability Act (ADA), Age Discrimination in Employment Act (ADEA) and Family Medical Leave Act (FMLA) as well as court decisions concerning wrongful termination and sexual harassment claims have increased exposures. The number of cases has risen and defending these claims is costly.

Cyber Liability

Data breaches are more frequent, leading to cyber extortion, third party liability and compromised sensitive information. State laws enforce legal requirements and expenses as business operations are disrupted.

Crime

ESOP companies are no different than others in having exposures to loss of money, securities and other property resulting from dishonest acts committed by an employee or other persons.

Actual ESOP Company Claims

- ◆ After performing its investigation, the Department of Labor filed a lawsuit against the plan sponsor and plan fiduciaries for failing to disclose to the plan participants facts concerning the downturn in the industry and the purchase of the company stock at an inflated share price. Fines and penalties were assessed by the Department of Labor. This matter was covered as a fiduciary claim and provided both defense costs coverage and payment for damages.
- ◆ A suit was brought against an ESOP company by a competitor alleging interference for attempting to solicit its customers in an inappropriate way. This matter was covered as a D&O claim. Defense costs and damages were paid by the policy.
- ◆ A computer virus corrupted the ESOP company's system software and data. Costs for repair and restoration of the company's computer program and electronic data were paid by the insurer.
- ◆ A company suffered a financial loss of over $100,000 as a result of an employee embezzling company funds. This claim was paid by the insurer as an employee dishonesty claim.
- ◆ An employee complained to his supervisor about insensitive treatment against him which he perceived to be race related. The employee was terminated and later filed an EEOC charge alleging discrimination and retaliation for the complaint. The claim was covered under Employment Practices Liability and both defense costs and damages awarded were paid by the insurer.
